PREFACE

People's empowerment essentially refers to empowering people to change power relations between spheres of life such as economical, political, social and spiritual.

Active participation of people in any community in the development process is recognized as a tool for its empowerment. Empowerment of rural people has emerged as an important issue in today. The economic empowerment of rural people is regarded these days as a very popular sign of progress for a country.

The study is attempt to analyse the role of empowerment of people in rural Assam. And also analyze the status of people and their empowerment in terms of various indicators such as access to education, employment, household decision making power, financial autonomy freedom of movement, political participation etc. in the state of Assam.
